

The Saturday picks have been on point as of late. Can the trend continue?

We at DobberHockey are just climbing new heights here with this column, as Marty and I have hit on 10 of 12 picks since my last entry! On a personal level I'm on a career high going an impressive 20-4 run over my past four weekly pieces. Once again, I hope you've been playing some proline or better yet logging into your off-shore accounts and smashing down a few coins! Hehe.. Let's hope the good time keep-a-rollin!

Vancouver @ Colorado (3:00pm ET)
By the Numbers – Frozen Pools

The Canucks roll into this one playing a red hot brand of hockey, etching their way closer to winning the Northwest Division. They've won their past four contests by a whopping 15-3 margin, and both netminders are very capable of stealing the show, regardless if its Schneider, with two shutouts in his last three contests, or Luongo, who stepped in beautifully this week. The Avs, oh the poor Avs..... Giggy certainly did his best stab at whipping the young Colorado kids into shape having them take accountability for their recently sloppy and lackadaisical play. His pointed yet non-accusing words apparently mustered enough of a reaction out of them to finally win in impressive fashion in their next outing.
