This month, Brian Kom chats with Dmitry Chesnokov of Yahoo! Puck Daddy and TSN, as well as Yahoo! Canada's Junior Hockey editor
Neate Sager
.

Episode 34: March 25, 2012 - click to listen ! Got a question for an upcoming guest? Email Kom !

This month begins with my interview with Puck Daddy writer and TSN contributor Dmitry Chesnokov, who tells us what to expect from Alexander Radulov for the rest of this year and beyond. We also discuss in-depth the increasing competition for players coming from the KHL, and what that might mean about the future of Russian-born players in the NHL like Evgeni Kuznetsov and Vladimir Tarasenko.

Then, we'll address one of the topics that always heats up this time of year-- tanking. I'll let you know about a new idea that could solve the problem in both the NHL, and your keeper leagues.

And finally, Yahoo! Canada's Junior Hockey editor Neate Sager gives you the goods on which teams and players you're going to want a keep an eye on in the OHL, WHL, and QMJHL as the road to the Memorial Cup kicks into gear. And with Sven Bartschi as inspiration, we'll kick around an idea for what may be a better way to rank the CHL's top scorers.

Listen to previous episodes here .

Please note that this will not be available on iTunes until Tuesday afternoon, as well as the last episode (we need to fix the glitch)