The lowdown on - Viktor Stalberg - If I had a nickel for every Toronto Maple Leafs cast-off that started to blossom for another team, well I'd have a lot of nickels. Viktor Stalberg is one of those players now starting to emerge for the Chicago Blackhawks. After finishing with just 24 points last season, Stalberg is on pace to post 48 this season.

One reason for the improved play of the Swedish left winger is his willingness to shoot the puck more. Last season he posted 135 shots, and this year he already has 131 with two months still left to play. A big part of that is Stalberg finally gaining more confidence and belief in his abilities as an NHL regular.

Stalberg has also found a way to be more consistent while putting together several hot streaks this season. Check out his points and goals charts from this year compared to last year.
