

June 29, 2012

Written by Jeff Angus

Thursday, 28 June 2012 23:06 - Last Updated Friday, 29 June 2012 12:56

The NHL and NHLPA are meeting today for the first time.

Detroit has asked about Rick Nash, but they are unlikely to make a move on him until after Zach Parise's situation is cleared up. The Wings will be hard after Parise, and Nash would be more of a consolation prize.

Make no mistake though, Detroit has the assets necessary to land Nash. That is if Scott Howson has lowered his ridiculous trade demand. Logan Couture? You could argue that Couture is already a better player than Nash, and he's cheaper and a lot younger.

The Panthers are set to buy out Mike Santorelli and Matt Bradley. Clearing out some cap space.

Steve Downie has signed a two-year extension with Colorado - cap hit of about $2.65 million. He fit in very well alongside Ryan O'Reilly and Gabriel Landeskog after the trade last year, and the trio should be one of the better two-way lines in the league if they are kept together.

June 29, 2012

Written by Jeff Angus

Thursday, 28 June 2012 23:06 - Last Updated Friday, 29 June 2012 12:56

Potential fits for Marty... Toronto? He and Francois Allaire don't see eye to eye, though. How about Chicago?

The Flames have re-signed defenseman Cory Sarich to a two-year deal worth $4 million total. The Flames now have 10 defensemen on one-way contracts.

Huge news out of New Jersey - martin Brodeur has hired an agent to represent him, and is looking like he will test the open market. Um... what?

Lots of Canucks stuff today – if you hate reading my Canucks content, skip past the first few paragraphs.

Cory Schneider did the team a huge favor by signing a three-year $12 million extension yesterday. Had he not signed before July 1, the threat of an offer sheet could have seriously hurt Vancouver's negotiating strategy.

June 29, 2012

Written by Jeff Angus

Thursday, 28 June 2012 23:06 - Last Updated Friday, 29 June 2012 12:56

On the other side, you could say that teams now know that the Canucks have to trade Luongo. This was common knowledge before the signing – Schneider is their guy, and Luongo will be on the move.

Mike Gillis dropped some other interesting tidbits during his annual summit meeting with season ticket holders.

Jordan Schroeder will be given every opportunity to earn the #2 C position while Ryan Kesler rehabs from a torn shoulder labrum (likely back in November).

Down the road... imagine Schroeder between the 6-3, 220 pound Kassian and the 6-2, 210 pound Jensen?

When asked about Schultz, Gillis replied “can’t talk about him now.” Added in “maybe later” right after. Let the speculation continue....

June 29, 2012

Written by Jeff Angus

Thursday, 28 June 2012 23:06 - Last Updated Friday, 29 June 2012 12:56

My weekly piece for the Canucks Army – five UFA's for the Canucks to take a look at, including former players Bryan Allen and Mikael Samuelsson . Read it all right here.

Some updates from TSN:

Florida is the current frontrunner for Roberto Luongo . The Canucks and the Leafs aren't really in trade discussions right now. The Canucks want Nick Bjugstad, but Florida obviously doesn't want to move the top prospect in college hockey.

Jordan Staal is likely going to sign a similar deal in Carolina to the one he rejected in Pittsburgh – 10 years, $60 million.

Bob McKenzie believes that the Oilers and Canucks are the Justin Schultz frontrunners.

June 29, 2012

Written by Jeff Angus

Thursday, 28 June 2012 23:06 - Last Updated Friday, 29 June 2012 12:56

Little known fact – Schultz was selected with one of the compensation picks that Edmonton sent to Anaheim after the offer sheet. Another one of the picks was Tyler Myers .

More from Bob – the Habs and Carey Price have started laying the groundwork for a new deal. I am a huge Price fan, and feel that if he is the exact type of goalie to lead a team to the Cup. It is now up to Marc Bergevin to get the right players around his star goalie.

He is speculating that the deal could be for six or seven years with a $6.5 million cap hit.

Trade rumors for Steve Ott persist. Defending Big D takes a look at the how and why behind Ott and his availability. He would be a perfect fit on a contending team. Dallas is already thin up the middle, and moving Ott out would only increase the weakness. However, Rome wasn't built in a day. Ott has more to offer a contending team as a missing piece than he does a rebuilding club. The Stars want a young forward in a one-for-one trade – they offered Ott to Vancouver for Cody Hodgson last season at the trade deadline.

Tyler Ennis was one of the better players in the entire league down the stretch last season. Does he slot in as the top center if the Sabres trade Derek Roy away? Is this finally the summer that the Sabres trade Roy? Roy, Ennis, and Hodgson is an awfully small top three up the middle, especially with Paul Gaustad

June 29, 2012

Written by Jeff Angus

Thursday, 28 June 2012 23:06 - Last Updated Friday, 29 June 2012 12:56

now gone from Buffalo.

Lots of interesting contract extensions yesterday...

Sidney Crosby re-ups for 12 more years at the same cap hit of $8.7 million. The deal is a huge relief for the Pens – Crosby took about 60% of what he could have (the max of about $14 million, there are more than a few teams that would have offered it to him next summer).

Jonathan Quick is a King for another 11 years. He signed a 10 year extension with a cap hit between $5 and $6 million.

Apparently the team has told Jonathan Bernier that they will look to move his services elsewhere – Toronto and Chicago would definitely be interested, as would Columbus. I wonder what kind of players the Kings would be after? Maybe a second line winger, as it doesn't look like Dustin Penner is coming back.

June 29, 2012

Written by Jeff Angus

Thursday, 28 June 2012 23:06 - Last Updated Friday, 29 June 2012 12:56

Tuukka Rask signed a one-year contract worth $3.5 million. He will be an RFA next summer. This is Boston's way of saying, "if you want the big bucks, show us you are worth it."

Hall Gill has re-upped with the Preds – two years and a $2 million cap hit. After acquiring him, Nashville's PK was just below 90%.

The salary cap floor has been confirmed for $54.2 million. This means that a lot of teams will have to add salary just to get there. I'd expect Tim Thomas will have a ton of trade value come August or September, as teams would love to add $5 million of cap money for only $3 million.

Pro Hockey Talk takes a look at several teams that need to add money.

Olli Jokinen is officially going to hit the market on July 1. He's the best center available, but will teams risk relying on him after only one good season? He's getting up there in age, too.

The Blue Jackets extended defenseman Nikita Nikitin for two years. Reasonable cap hit of less

June 29, 2012

Written by Jeff Angus

Thursday, 28 June 2012 23:06 - Last Updated Friday, 29 June 2012 12:56

than $2.5 million. Nikitin was a top pairing defenseman for the Jackets after the trade from St. Louis.

His production was pretty impressive, too. He had seven goals and 32 points in only 54 games for the Jackets.

Nikitin has a massive point shot that is fairly accurate, and he could make a great long term pairing for either James Wisniewski or Jack Johnson . I'm not sure if his production last season is a sign of things to come, or a blip in the radar. He was always projected as more of a physical, stay-at-home defenseman.

Carolina back up Brian Boucher is out for 4-6 months with a shoulder injury. Is there another Staal brother that can play goal?

Talented B's prospect Alexander Khokhlachev is going to play in Russia next year, but he will still attend Boston's training camp. His nickname is KoKo, and I am definitely going to refer to him as that from now on. His name has about two h's too many.

June 29, 2012

Written by Jeff Angus

Thursday, 28 June 2012 23:06 - Last Updated Friday, 29 June 2012 12:56

KoKo played in the OHL last season, and he has an outside shot at cracking the Bruins.

With all of the cap space the Dallas Stars possess, do they try and acquire Jay Bouwmeester from Calgary? They could easily absorb his cap hit, and the Flames are looking to move him (if you believe some of the rumors going around).

Pretending Jamie Benn gets $5 million on a new deal, the Stars have just under $15 million to add a defenseman and a few forwards (just to reach the floor). I don't see them spending right to the limit now, but the team's financial constraints are long gone. They could be a team to watch in the first few weeks of July.

Don't forget to read Brendan Ross's ramblings over at DobberProspects – here are his Thursday ramblings, with a lot of insights on the Edmonton head coaching situation (Ralph Krueger was hired).

What's better than decade-old highlights of the NHL All-Star game? Not much:

June 29, 2012

Written by Jeff Angus

Thursday, 28 June 2012 23:06 - Last Updated Friday, 29 June 2012 12:56

{youtube}iXA493hhRAU{/youtube}