

Keeper League #1

Written by Dobber

Friday, 16 March 2007 12:30 - Last Updated Friday, 17 July 2009 10:05

These rules are for the pool that Dobber himself runs:

DOBBERCUP FEATURES SUMMARY:

- 1. Money league, skaters, goalie, farm
- 2. Regular season, playoff and rookie trophies and winnings
- 3. Majority vote every three years on whether or not to increase entry fee
- 4. $100 minimum bid to purchase new franchise with access earnings going to previous owner
- 5. Appearance at draft is mandatory: only your death, funeral or serious injury is an acceptable excuse

Keeper League #1

Written by Dobber

Friday, 16 March 2007 12:30 - Last Updated Friday, 17 July 2009 10:05

6. Only NHL drafted or signed players are eligible for draft

7. Max five trades per season with UNLIMITED trading in offseason

8. Two complaints followed by a 75% veto vote to nullify a trade

9. Only one free agent signing each season

10. Free agent signing must be 24 or older. Younger players are only available in draft

DOBBERCUP RULES AND REGULATIONS

General

This is an ongoing pool. This means that the players you choose in the first draft could feasibly be on your team in the year 2010. Everything possible is being done to ensure that everyone in this pool is extremely knowledgeable about hockey, and extremely serious about hockey pools. I don't want people quitting after three years just because they've done poorly. Suck it up and rebuild. Sure it costs money, but it's not about the money, it's about fun (and bragging rights).

1. Entry fee is $80 per year. This must be paid on or before draft day in cash. Exceptions need to be arranged with me beforehand, and SOME leeway will be given in extreme circumstances. Failure to comply will result in your team being auctioned off to the highest bidder. At which point, $80 would go towards the entry fee, and the remainder will go to the owner selling the team.
2. Every three years, the owners will review the entry fee. Only by majority vote, will the fee

Keeper League #1

Written by Dobber

Friday, 16 March 2007 12:30 - Last Updated Friday, 17 July 2009 10:05

be increased. (A vote GREATER than 50% of the owners)

3. No refunds, obviously.

4. Ideally, everyone will be in this pool for decades, but there will be times when people quit. When this happens, anyone interested in joining the pool will submit bids to me, sealed in an envelope, by a deadline. The minimum bid is $100; any access earnings will go to the owner that put the team up for sale.

5. One point is given for a goal, and one point is given for an assist. The team with the most points at the end of the regular season or playoffs wins. Tiebreaker #1 is most goals by the 12 members of the pro team (revised April 15th, 2002). Tiebreaker #2 is best +/- rating by the 12 members of the pro team. No prizes will be split unless the unlikely event that all three of the above end in a tie.

6. Every year, prior to the draft, owners can submit proposals for rule adjustments or additions. A vote of greater than 50% would pass the proposal.

Awards/Prize Money

1. The following is the prize structure based on 12 teams (September 29th, 2002):

12 owners x $80.00: $960.00

1st place, regular season $275.00 and the XXXX Cup (trophy)

2nd place, regular season $120.00

3rd place, regular season $ 80.00

1st place, playoffs $225.00 and the YYYYYY Cup (trophy)

2nd place, playoffs $120.00

3rd place, playoffs $ 80.00

Rookie of the year owner $ 20.00 and the rookie Trophy

Administration/expenses $ 40.00

2. The rookie of the year award goes to the owner with POSSESSION of a player who is eligible for the Calder trophy in the NHL (revised September 30th, 2001).

3. The first winner of the regular season will have the trophy named after them (so named the XXXX Cup after inaugural winner XXX XXXX, April 14th, 2002). The first winner of the Rookie of the Year award will have the trophy named after them (so named the XXX XXXX Trophy, April 20th, 2003).

4. Anyone that fails to return a trophy to me by the end of August is subject to a $20 fine. Exceptions can be made if arrangements are made with me for a later return date. However, failure to meet the alternate arrangements will result in a $20 fine. In other words, if clearly no effort is made to get the trophy back to me, I will assess the fine at my discretion. Effective the

Keeper League #1

Written by Dobber

Friday, 16 March 2007 12:30 - Last Updated Friday, 17 July 2009 10:05

summer of 2004.
(September 14, 2003)

Drafting

The draft will be held every year at the home of whoever volunteers. This could mean a trip every September to London, Toronto, etc.

1. Appearance at the draft is mandatory. There is absolutely no excuse for weddings or ball tournament. Exceptions will be made a) if you die or b) a funeral or c) a serious accident. If b or c happen, simply forward your list to me, I will draft your players for you according to that list. If you are unable to do that, you are free to choose the amount of players equal to the number of draft picks you own, after the draft is over. The reason I say this is to ensure everyone is serious about the pool. We all want competition and we won't get it if someone does not take it as seriously as the rest.
2. The draft will be held on the final Sunday of September at 1pm. Owners are obligated to appear at this one event every year. If an owner has something that falls on the same day, they can notify me a month in advance and I will try to make other arrangements to hold the draft with perfect attendance. If the draft date cannot be changed, a list can be given to another owner. (January, 2006) If an owner fails to appear for three straight drafts, his membership in this pool will be reviewed and voted on. A 50% vote would remove this owner from the pool.
3. To decide the order of the very first draft (2001) draft, numbers will be chosen from a hat. The draft order will then go 1 to 12, 12 to 1, 1 to 12, etc, until all 18 roster spots are filled. Subsequent drafts will go in the order of finish in the regular season. The last place team will have the #1 overall pick (unless traded). The first place team will have the #12 overall pick (unless traded). There will be three rounds of drafting every year.
4. A five-minute timeout may be called at any time during the draft by the owner who has possession of the draft pick at that time for TRADING PURPOSES ONLY. The initial draft, however, will have no timeouts, and none of the initial draft picks may be traded.
5. Players are eligible to be drafted, only if they are drafted or signed by an NHL team. This means that no 16-year-old prodigies can be picked, obviously.
6. Teams initially have three draft picks per year, one for each round. However they can have as many, or as few as they want, depending on what they do with the picks in terms of trading in the past.
7. If a team's roster is full when they draft a player, one player must be dropped from their roster. That player is then in the draft pool for anyone to choose.
8. Not all draft picks need to be used. If an owner does not have a spot on their roster for another player, and they cannot trade the pick, they may simply "pass".

Keeper League #1

Written by Dobber

Friday, 16 March 2007 12:30 - Last Updated Friday, 17 July 2009 10:05

9. In the event that an entire season is wiped out due to a strike or a lockout, the draft will proceed as usual. The draft order will be the same as the summer before, and picks that have been traded will remain traded. Bottom line – a strike/lockout changes nothing with respect to the draft. (September 2004)

10. In the event that an owner inadvertently drops an extra player at the draft, when in actuality they had enough room on their roster to allow for a draft pick without dropping a player, said owner is allowed to negate his final drop and keep that player. (October 14, 2006)

Trading

1. Any assets may be traded at anytime during the year. Assets are players, and draft picks. 2 for 1 trades, 3 for 1 trades, 3 for 2 trades, etc are all legal.

2. Each team has a maximum of five (5) trades per season. This begins at the conclusion of the draft and ends at 9pm on the day of the NHL trade deadline. Owners are not obligated to use all five of their trades.

3. No trades can be made from 9:01pm on the day of the NHL trade deadline, until midnight (12am) of the day that the Stanley Cup is won. However, there is UNLIMITED trading from midnight of the day the Cup is won, until 5pm the day of the draft.

4. Players traded during the regular season bring their points with them. For example, player A has 40 points and is traded for player B and a draft pick, and player B has 30 points. The team getting player A will receive his 40 points and thus will move up 10 points in the standings, provided both players were on his pro team.

5. "Buddy" trades will not be accepted. If anyone believes that a trade is FAR too lopsided, they may lodge a complaint with me. If that complaint is seconded, a vote will take place. A vote of 75% or greater will be sufficient to nullify the trade. THE COMPLAINT MUST BE LODGED WITHIN 48 HOURS OF THE TRADE. Owners win deals and lose deals - it happens. Sometimes owners lose deals badly. This rule is in place only for extreme situations. It is to prevent two friends from stacking one of the teams and splitting the prize money. It is also to prevent an owner who is planning on quitting the pool at season's end from helping someone out by giving them a "deal".

6. If an owner quits the pool at the end of the season, their last two trades will be investigated, even though the 48-hour deadline is long over. By a 75% percent vote, if either of the trades are deemed unfair, or that the players involved were "unloaded" at a price too cheap, the team or teams involved will be penalized by losing some, or all of their draft picks. This will be done by a vote of 50%. If a penalized team does not have any draft picks that year; picks for the following year will be used.

7. If a trade is made involving an injured or traded (in the NHL) player, and the owner receiving said player was not aware of it, too bad. This is a serious pool, and it is the responsibility of the owner to know everything about the trade that they are making. In the event that one owner misleads another owner – for example they claim that a player is healthy when, in fact, they are not – then the victimized owner must appeal within 24 hours of the trade. This is a very rare circumstance, and is only successful if the owner can convince me that he was intentionally misled. In which case, compensation that is agreed upon by both owners will be awarded. If neither owner can agree, all the owners in the pool will vote on whether to nullify the deal by a 75% vote.

Keeper League #1

Written by Dobber

Friday, 16 March 2007 12:30 - Last Updated Friday, 17 July 2009 10:05

8. (January, 2006) A three-way deal counts as one trade for each of the three owners. This is so rare I have never actually seen it done, but just wanted this in writing. Each owner must give and receive at least one asset for this to be deemed a three-way deal. Furthermore, each owner must have dealings with the other two owners in some fashion.

Rosters

1. Rosters consist of 12 pro team players and eight farm team players. The 12 players with the highest point total will be counted for your final roster. Draft position is based on the total of your pro team. (September 2006) Rosters must be 20 players or less on September 1st until the conclusion of the draft later in the month. After the draft, the rosters become elastic. If a player is added via a two-for-one trade or via unrestricted free agency, the roster can expand to accommodate. However, by August 31st (at midnight) the rosters must slip back to 20 players. Failure to submit your waived players that are required to bring your roster back down to 20 by the required time will result in your lowest points player being automatically waived. In the event that there is a tie for the lowest points, it will be taken alphabetically by last name.

2. Pro teams must be full at all times. Farm teams may consist of zero to unlimited players.

3. In 2008, rosters will expand to 24 players, including 12 skaters on the pro team plus a goalie. The other 11 spots can be goalies or skaters, and after the draft is over rosters will be elastic as per the usual.

Unrestricted Free Agency

1. Each team would be allowed one free agent signing during the season for players 24 years of age and older. Example - Andy McDonald in 2005-06. Perhaps TEAM X sees something in him back in November and decides to use his 'free agent' signing. He scoops McDonald up. Or perhaps TEAM X wishes to save his 'free agent' signing for a later date, but lo and behold TEAM Y scoops up McDonald in January. Too bad for TEAM X, it's first come first serve. Strategies that come into play - 'when' do you use your free agent signing? Do you need to use one at all? It's another element that encourages GM's to keep an eye out for any 24, 25, 26, or even 34 year olds that start to show big promise. Another example - perhaps in February TEAM X 'signs' Mike Knuble for the purpose of trading him at the deadline to TEAM Y for some young promise. The UFA signing can be used any time after the draft and before the trade deadline.

2. The age limit is set so nobody grabs a youngster - youngsters should be chosen in the entry draft, just like the NHL. Again - only one free agent signing per year, because you generally don't see NHL teams signing more than that, and it adds more strategy if your moves

Keeper League #1

Written by Dobber

Friday, 16 March 2007 12:30 - Last Updated Friday, 17 July 2009 10:05

are limited (much like the 5-trade rule).

3. A newly-signed player must remain on your team for two weeks. This prevents a deadline deal from a top team saying "use your free agent signing and pick up Knuble, and then trade him to me" if that top team had already used their free agent signing for the year.

Goaltenders

Beginning in September of 2008, goalies will be added to the Dobbercup Hockey Pool. After the draft, the following rules will apply:

1. All pro teams must have a goalie. Pro teams will consist of 12 skaters and one goalie. No more than one goalie, and no less than one goalie.
2. A goalie's points are calculated as follows: WINS – LOSSES + ½ OT LOSS + 2*SO + 5% of Saves – 15% of Goals Allowed. Calculations will be done by the pool manager online program – just know that wins and saves and shutouts are good...losses and goals against are bad.
3. A farm team can have as many goalies as you want. If you want to have 12 pro team skaters, one pro team goalie, and 11 goalies on your farm – great. If you want zero goalies on your farm – great.
4. If none of your goalies make the playoffs, you will have an empty roster spot. That spot will give you zero points in the playoffs.
5. Failure to own at least one goaltender to put on your pro team will result in a blank space in that spot. If there is a blank spot on your pro team during the offseason, that is OKAY. If there is a blank spot during the regular season, that is NOT OKAY. For every day that a team has no goalie on the roster, they will lose one point from the end of season totals. 50 days means you lose 50 points. If you are not in the Top 5 in the standings at the end of the season, those points will be ADDED to your totals and not subtracted. No goalie at the end of the season on your roster means an automatic 50 points removed if you are in the Top 5, or 50 points added if you are not, in addition to the daily points you were losing. Any attempt to play this system or find a loophole in this rule to secure a better draft pick or somehow secure a victory will result in a review by the other 11 owners and a vote will be taken as to how many more points to add or subtract. The point is – make sure one goalie is on your team.
6. If you only have goalies on your team that are either injured, retired, or prospects, and these players have zero points (or less than zero points) and you are able to put a goalie on your pro team with zero points (or less) and evade the heavy penalties outlined in point #5 the following will take place: the commish will choose an old goalie on a non-playoff team with the perfect amount of points to screw up whatever you are trying to do, and the goalie will be added to your roster upon majority vote by the other owners. If you are trying to sandbag, I will choose a goalie with 40-50 points (enough points to stop the fast one you are trying to pull). If you are trying to 'go for it' by forcing me to automatically put a goalie on your team that is undrafted, I

Keeper League #1

Written by Dobber

Friday, 16 March 2007 12:30 - Last Updated Friday, 17 July 2009 10:05

will find one with 15 points and lots of age and no playoff value...and screw those plans up too. This goalie that is forced upon you can not be traded. The moral of the story: don't do this. I never want to see this rule implemented, and I don't expect to.

Other

1. Be very careful with the trades you make, and be very smart with your draft picks. I know from experience that once your team goes in the tank after bad trades and stupid picks, it takes four or five years to get back out and compete once again.
2. IMPORTANT: Return all phonecalls and all emails within 48 hours if possible. Even for offers that seem stupid, at least give owners the courtesy of a two-minute phone call or email. Nobody likes waiting for answers, and it may affect other deals they are considering which are time sensitive. If the offer requires further thought, email the person with a brief note: "I'll think about this for the next ## days and get back to you". If hitting "reply" and typing that sentence is too time consuming, then join a Toronto Star pool where you just have to check boxes once per year.

OFFICIAL DOBBERCUP WEBSITE: (it's a secret)

Expansion Team (from 2002 expansion rules)

We have voted to expand to a 13th team in 2007, and we will follow the guidelines that we used for 2002. I have updated any stale information:

1. Current owners can protect ten (10) players on their roster. Any 10 players, not necessarily the top 10 point getters.
2. Ten (10) players must be left unprotected. If after protecting your 10 players you have a roster spot vacant amongst the remaining eight spots, the highest draft pick in the coming year will be included to fill that spot. IMPORTANT: If two spots are free, than the highest draft pick of the FOLLOWING year will be included to fill that spot, and so on through the years.
3. Bidding starts at $100 and can be submitted to me anytime via email. Bidding stops one week after the third bid is received, or on July 31st, whichever occurs first. There is no minimum or maximum number of bidders needed. If I do not receive a bid by the end of July (31st) than no expansion will happen. For the purpose of 2007, we will only expand by one team, giving us 13 in total.
4. The winning expansion team will then have an expansion draft by Sunday, August 27th at 8pm. Protected lists must be submitted by midnight on August 20th. In the event that a protected list is NOT submitted by midnight of the deadline via email, that team's top 10 scorer's of the prior season will be protected (not always desirable for that owner, thus they should make sure they get the list in!). Trading will be frozen from midnight, August 20th until 8pm August 27th. At which point, unlimited trading reopens and the expansion team can now be involved in trades.

Keeper League #1

Written by Dobber

Friday, 16 March 2007 12:30 - Last Updated Friday, 17 July 2009 10:05

5. One player from each team's unprotected list is to be selected onto the expansion team. This gives the new team 12 players to start with.

6. The new team will select 3rd overall in the entry draft. The new team will select first overall in the 2nd round, 1st overall in the 3rd round, and 1st overall in the 4th round (see point # 8) giving the new team 16 players. The new team will then pick four players after the draft to complete the roster, unless, via trade, the new team has acquired draft picks and had already filled his roster.

7. Some people have voiced concerns over losing quality players with their "11th best" player going to a new team. Or that some teams can afford to lose their "11th best" while others cannot. Or that some teams only have 10 quality guys, and some teams only have 11, and this system favors the teams that already have just 10 quality guys! My argument is this: Everyone loses out in this expansion draft, but the person that loses the biggest is the new owner. Getting everyone's 11th best player takes a lot of balls, and agreeing to an expansion team under these conditions takes a lot of dedication. The least we can do is grant the new guy a decent player from each of our teams without hurting our core. If any more players are protected, it may prove difficult to find an interested party to expand.

8. For this year, a fourth round will be added to the draft. This 4th round pick MAY NOT BE TRADED. It does not even need to be used. Its purpose is merely to fill the hole on your roster left by expansion. Everyone has the option of picking in the 4th round. Rules of the other rounds apply to this one, except for the fact that this pick cannot be traded.

The following is a sample of an expansion team based on MY OPINIONS ONLY (and a very quick one at that, without studying the teams too hard) as to who would be the 10 protected on each team, to give the interested person an idea of what he is getting into. Print this attachment and let anyone interested read it over.

1. Kyle Calder, Phi
2. Patrick Eaves, Ott
3. Loui Eriksson, Dal
4. Chuck Kobasew, Cgy
5. Petr Sykora, Edm
6. Dustin Brown, LA
7. Marek Zidlicky, Nsh
8. Joni Pitkanen, Phi
9. Jiri Hudler, Det
11. Radim Vrbata, Chi
12. Marco Sturm, Bos
13. Brendan Morrison, Van
14. The 3rd best player available in the entry draft. (this year it was Phil Kessel, last year it was Bobby Ryan, in 2004 it was Michael Ryder). Our last expansion team took Rick Nash with this pick. This will likely be the centerpiece of the new expansion team.
15. The 14th best player available in the entry draft. (this year it was Alexei Kaigorodov, last year it was Eric Fehr, in 2004 it was Ruslan Fedotenko)

Keeper League #1

Written by Dobber

Friday, 16 March 2007 12:30 - Last Updated Friday, 17 July 2009 10:05

16. The 28th best player available in the entry draft. (this year it was Jason Williams, last year it was Raffi Torres, in 2004 it was Teemu Selanne – redrafted).
17. The 42nd best player available in the entry draft. (in 2005 Jussi Jokinen was chosen 44th)
18. The 56th best player available in the entry draft.
19. The 57th best player
20. The 58th best player
21. The 59th best available player.

The new team is looking at a young star, several 60-point players, and about 15 prospects of which half will become something pretty good, the other half will be replaced in the next draft. The XXX XXXX, led by GM M. XXXX, is an expansion team that finished third in his third full season (plus a lockout). It can be done, and it has. By these rules.

A decent team to start, will likely finish 10th-12th in the first year which is how things go for expansion teams. Compete, and grow. Intelligent drafting of blue chip prospects could have this team compete for $ in its 3rd year. The fact that the new guy is pretty much throwing his bid money away for the first two years indicates that he is hardcore and in this pool for the fun and the challenge. Which is what we want. Expansion benefits us all. Our prize money grows, the amount of players available thins (which makes drafting more of a challenge), and most of all, we get another solid hockey guy to talk to and deal with.

Updated teams can always be found on the Dobbercup website: (it's a secret)