

Why Goalie Post Kicks Ass

Written by Dobber

Friday, 09 September 2011 07:58 - Last Updated Monday, 12 September 2011 09:11

{youtube}LA8ffi2Je74{/youtube}

My partner Justin Goldman (@thegoalieguild on Twitter), quickly explains some the new features (as well as some key, 'must-see' features) over at the Goalie Post . This is the premier site for fantasy goalie/starting NHL goalie information.

Last year the website was 100% a pay site. We have made some key things free and have added to the Premium area. Now I would say that it is 60% pay. Founder Jeff Hillen is still a big part of this website, and as far as evaluating goalies are concerned - is there anyone better than Goldman? So the content has increased - for both free and Premium. And the payment flexibility has improved.

Hillen loves his creation and only time constraints made him sell. The site is too much for one man with a young family to handle. That's why other sites (and many have tried) Goalie Post one have shut down.

This

attempt here

gave up. So did

this one

. They'll tell you first hand that it's not easy keeping tabs on the starting goalie announcements 24/7 - and to add incredibly goalie tips content on top of that? Forget about it.

Why Goalie Post Kicks Ass

Written by Dobber

Friday, 09 September 2011 07:58 - Last Updated Monday, 12 September 2011 09:11

Do other sites have a professional full-time goalie scout? That's what Goldman does 24/7. Do other sites have a professional full-time fantasy hockey fanatic? As you all know - that's me. Accurate starting goalie information from Goldman. Incredible scheduling tools from Hillen. Fantasy analysis from myself.

Getting back to the payment flexibility point. Hillen didn't have the time to offer anything more than a $9.99 annual membership. With our help, the options are many:

1. You can visit the site for free and get today's starting goaltenders

2. You can pay $9.99 for an annual membership (get email updates, tomorrow's starters, the weekly grid, Goldman's exclusive subscription magazine, etc) - 83 cents per month - and support the hard work.

3. You can pay $3.99 and just try it for a month

Why Goalie Post Kicks Ass

Written by Dobber

Friday, 09 September 2011 07:58 - Last Updated Monday, 12 September 2011 09:11

4. You can pay $16.99 and combine this membership with the Frozen Pool one (works out to 71 cents per month) like J.P. from

Japer's Rink

did:

5. You can pay $38.99 and combine it with my Fantasy Guide, Midseason Guide, Playoff Draft List and Prospects Report.

6. You can pay $59.99 for the Gold Pack and get this with EVERYTHING in the Dobber Sports Network - all of my products noted above, plus the Frozen Pool and Hockey Pool Geek memberships. (at this point, the goalie post portion is down to a shade over 60 cents a month!)

Buy Now !